WHAT IS DOING AT THE BIG CULLEN MINES.

Saturday a Big Day in Marion—The Columbia and the Memphis Men Make Big Draws.

A staff reporter of the Press and his better half made an early fitting to the Bonhah land of the mineralogist on Sunday last and visited the celebrated Cullen and Nancy Hanks mines, near Sodden. From seeing the huge machinery which has recently passed through Marion headed for the Cullen mine we were prepared to be astonished, but the reality exceeded our most vivid imagination.

Arrived at the Cullen we saw stacked up in every direction piles upon piles of heavy lumber, and learn that five or six wagons are added to these piles daily, when before we loaded up the skeleton of a building solid in its structure, grand in its proportions. Here are its dimensions:

Length 120 feet, breadth 60 feet, height of separating section 125 feet; height of middle section 100 feet. And just imagine that vast building being rapidly filled with the heaviest and most costly machinery known to the mining art, and then you have but a faint conception of what the Cullen people are doing. Why, we were told by one who should know that the company intend spending $100,000 this summer in betterments alone.

We were shown through a small portion of the plant open to spectators by the man in charge, our old friend A. G. Butler, who explained to us a great deal about the machinery already placed and to be placed at the works.

These will consist of two vertical boilers, each of 200 horse power, which have not yet been placed in position; a condensation engine, now in position, with two 7 foot fly wheels, a revolving fly er, 20 feet in length, 2 powerful crushers; 4 large collets, 9 big separators; a large air compressor and a big building filled with other machinery yet to be placed.

The house containing the entrance to the main shaft was rock ed, and we failed to see either it or any of the ore which has been taken from it, as all the ore was under lock and key also. From an auxiliary shaft just outside the building we saw specimens of crystallized spar on a big stone formation.

Mr. Butler informed us that there is no doubt as to the extent and value of the vein, which is a mixture of lead, zinc and fluor spar.

Major Hearne is on the ground every day, superintending construction and working like a benv-er himself; and when one remembers the vast sums of money the Major has and is pouring into this pet enterprise of his, we can but admire the pluck and faith that is in him, and wish him God speed. The Press tips its hat to you and the Cullen, Major.

We also visited the Nancy Hanks, situated near the Cullen mine, but found the door locked and no one at home. Doubtless Aunt Nancy had gone to church.

We saw on the dump, however, some 50 or 60 tons of lump ore, a mixture of lead and zinc, and a small quantity of crystallized fluor spar. In another pile there was probably 2 or 3 tons of zinc gravel ore, which had been shot out of the washer and appeared to be in almost a pure state. We were told the Nancy has gotten out more on in the past two weeks than at any period in its history.

Mr. Lewis, of the Nancy Hanks, arrived a few days ago and wants to hire men to assist in prospecting, as we were told.

Very Sodden and vicinity is surrounded by vast riches, which time will surely bring to the surface.

Mr. R. W. Hines, of the firm of R. W. Hines & Co., merchants of Fordsville, was in the city yesterday on one of his ordinary business trips, but he brought with him a hand bag well filled with heavy substance. This was the unusual feature of his journey. The heavy substance were specimens of chrys and mineral bearing rocks which were found on land near Fordsville. Mr. Hines took the samples to Becker B. H. Pindexter, who is known as an authority on the subject and to have paying interests in several rich mines in the western part of the State. Several of the specimens were pronounced to be valuable, if found in sufficient quantities, and further explorations will soon be made. A part of the State geological corps will be in that locality next week and Mr. Hines and others will lead all and possible in trying to determine whether or not there are rich deposits of mineral in that region. —Owensboro Messenger.

The farm where the ore was discovered is known as the old Sanders' place. It is five miles from Paducah and fronts on the Benton road. —News Democrat.

The fine vein of spar struck on the Widow Franks' farm by Mess. Gray and Persons, shows signs of a fine lead vein now. The gentlemen are feeling quite elated over their prospects.

Ten horses pulled and dragged through the streets of Marion one day last week with the great 200 horse power engine for the Eagle Flourspar company. Its actual weight was 16,000 pounds.

The Huster is informed that preparations are being made to this city this week for S. V. Levi, Oakland City; C. H. Whitehouse, Louisville; Clarence Hinckle, Evansville.

R. W. Wilson has acquired the entire stock of the "Wilson Mining Co." which concern owned some valuable territory near the Crittenden Springs.

The immense 200 h. p. boilers for the Cullen mine weigh 13 tons (26,000 pounds) each, making a total of 52,000 pounds.

They are now sinking at the Stevens fire clay mine in the Salmon district and expect to begin shipping in a short time.

The vein at the Cullen is 23 ft. 4 inches in width. The main shaft is now down 157 feet.

The strokestack of the Cullen mine is 120 feet high.

Luther Haydon, Secretary of the Southwestern Land and Mining company of Hopkinsville, Ky., has just sold the Clifton Coal company coal and timber lands in Munington, Ky., containing 1000 acres, to Hon. Wm. Lynch of Dawson Springs, including two coal mines, 36 coke ovens, the company's store building, a number of tenant houses, the town site of Munington, and the entire machinery of the Clifton Coal company. The consideration has not been made public, but the Clifton Coal company paid $10 per acre for the land twenty years ago and the sum is estimated to be $100,000.

Capt. S. A. Fowler has at his office at First and Broadway a heavy chunk of lead ore, which also shows a trace of silver.

Capt. Fowler found the ore on his farm, which is located on the south bank of Clark's river, this county. Many old residents of that section claim that there used to be, years ago, a silver mine on Clark's river, which was worked by Indians.

CROWELL—HAMILTON.

June 8th was a lovely, ideal day—just the day for an ideal wedding—such a one as was enjoyed by a circle of friends and relatives at the residence of W. C. Hamilton. W. D. Crowell, the groom, is one of the best known and one of the most popular young men that Crittenden county has ever produced. The bride is the young and beautiful daughter of W. C. Hamilton.

Promptly at 4:30 the bride, dressed in Pean-de-Cyng silk, trimmed with chille lace, made in Louis XIV style, appeared leaning on the arm of the groom, and stepping to the sweet strains of music.

The parlor was filled with friends and relatives. The ceremony was duly performed by Rev. James F. Price, which launched them on the sea of marital life. They were warmly and sincerely congratulated.

Our New Salem correspondent says:

Now忙 in hauling lumber for the big plant at the Cullen mines.

The owners of the Cullen mill, now under construction, say that the whistle for their mill will be the Nancy Hanks in the shade. Well, she will have to be a honey, you bet.

Among the attending friends none added more to the occasion than Mrs. McAuley, of Blackford, who, with her sunny and genial nature and ready wit could give a happy turn at every point and could dissipate so happily every

HIDDEN GOLD,

LETTER FROM KANSAS.

Found by a Farmers Little Child In Graves County.

J. A. Jackson, living one mile and a half from Hiser, this county, says the News-Democrat, while plowing in his garden the other day, saw his little child in the furrow just ahead of his horse, and told it to get out of the way. At the time the child left the furrow it had something in its hand and asked its father what it was. He turned around and was surprised at the child having in its hands several pieces of gold and silver. He devoted the balance of the afternoon to plowing, digging and scraping about the garden. He was not disappointed, for he was soon rewarded by finding quite a lot of both gold and silver. Some of it was dated 1812, but none of later date than 1830.

The garden is where the dwelling house of Mrs. Leachman, who used to be a slaveholder in ante-bellum days, stood, and who lived there during the war, but who has been dead for over 30 years.

The old house has been torn down and near where it stood a new house was built many years ago, and it is supposed that this money was buried there during war times, where it has remained until the present.

Mr. Jackson was highly delighted with his find for he is very certain that the real owner of the money has long since crossed the dark river. The amount found was no small sum, in fact it amounts to many dollars.

remained, and worked, and toiled, and waited, and there are few men who stood up for Kansas in her darkest hours but have tried to work, and it has not come around within the last ten years.

Now listen, you eastern gents, we used to think it too proper to go to join Kansas and Kansas, and I will state solid facts only. Today the people are probably at the bottom of any people in the United States. We have substantial and pretty cities and towns; farms are well improved generally, many farmers having good bank accounts, towns are all improving, good roads and steel bridges across most all of the rivers and creeks, and last but not least, the best public school system in the country, the largest State Normal school in the world at Emporia, a splendid University at Lawrence and all the state benevolent institutions that any other state has, and there are ten thousand miles of railroad in the State, and oil, and gas, and salt in unlimited quantities, and one State produces one-fourth of all the zinc in the world. I think it is Cherokee County in the southeastern part of the state, and all creation knows of Kansas wheat, Kansas corn, and Kansas meat, but all the world don't know about Kansas alfalfa, something on the order of red clover. After a field is once set, or has a stand of it, it is perpetual and rarely ever has to be sown again. It yields abundantly, is usually cut three times each season, makes splendid pasture for cattle and hogs, and the best hay for cattle that has ever been found, so far as I know. But the best of all is, alfalfa is perfectly adapted to a dry climate, and is proving to be the very salvation of all the western country, for it never gets so dry but one or two good rains are raised.

Crops were fine here last year, and the prospects are good for the present year, only we are having too much rain. It rains every few days, and very heavy rains. Some one has said it never rains too much in Kansas, but we who live here know better. It will injure wheat if it keeps on.

Now, Mr. Editor, you and your readers may think I am boasting Kansas and wanting people to come here and settle. Not one little bit of it; the boasting days are over; but right here is worth from $25 to $50 per acre, and much of it could not be bought at the latter price. Many eastern men are coming here and paying as much as $7,000 for a quarter section of land.

Some one is sending to me your paper. It is quite interesting, but do you know there are but few people mentioned in its columns that I remember or ever heard of; but I shall ever remember that Kentucky is my native state, and may God ever bless dear old Kentucky, and her kindhearted and chivalrous people.

For Congress,
OLIE M. JAMES.

The State Democratic Convention, which assembled in Louisville on Wednesday of last week, performed its duties with much less friction and heat than was anticipated, and adjourned after a two days session in great good humor and brotherly fellowship.

The opposition to the administration failed signal to develop the strength with which they had been credited, the Beckham forces winning all contested points in a manner, securing complete control of the party machinery, naming the delegates to the National Convention and formulating the platform.

The opposition seemed to take their defeat good humoredly, and it is to be hoped that the last vestige of discontent will now disappear from the ranks of the party.

The speech of Congressman James nominating Gov. Beckham for the temporary chairmanship was a model of its kind and did much toward smoothing the ruffled plumage of the opposition, and creating a better understanding. Ollie is a shrewd politician and knows just when and where to 'pour oil upon the troubled waters.'

Judge Lewis McQuown was made Chairman of the State Central and Executive Committees, and Gov. Beckham, Ollie James, and Senators Blackburn and McCrory were selected as delegates from the State at large to the National Convention.

The unit rule was adopted but no instructions were given. Just before the Convention adjourned resolutions were introduced endorsing Judge Alton B. Parker for the Presidency, and although Judge Parker seemed to be a favorite, the delegates were worn out and refused to consider the resolutions.

There was a small fight among the committee on resolutions, but the platform as adopted is substantially as follows:

It condemns the "unjust and unnecessary Federal taxation maintained by the Republican administration" and demands a revision of the tariff in a conservative spirit. The increase of expenditures under Federal rule is condemned, and the encroachments by the President upon the constitution are denounced. The resolutions further favor the regulation of trusts and recommend a thorough investigation of all federal departments on the ground that the refusal of the Republicans to permit further investigation of the post office department suggests hidden corruption.

The course of Gov. Durbin of Indiana, in "refusing to surrender on requisition from the Governor of Kentucky the persons of William S. Taylor and Charles Finley, fugitives from justice, charged with the murder of William Goebel," is denounced as a violation of the constitution of the United States.

In the First district Mott Ayres is Executive Committeeman and C. J. Whittemore is on the Central committee.

Hon C. C. Grassham was made Elector from the First District.

Hon John L. Grayson was appointed alternate delegate to the National Convention from the First district.

The citizens of Marion are called upon to vote next Monday in a question of momentous importance—the enlarging of the school building. The sale of bonds if voted being for that purpose. It should be a matter of city pride that this is necessary. That our buildings are too small stands uncontested, and is the highest compliment that could be paid the school. This is the golden age of Marion; the age that will be looked back to with pride by this generation; an age of progress. On every side are evidences of prosperity—new homes, beautifully kept lawns, new walks, city enlarged and all tending to one grand necessity, more facilities for educating our children. Our young people are the pride of Marion. Where is the man who is not willing to lend his influence and his vote to the greatest enterprise within the city. "The Marion Grand School."

The name of Congressman Ollie M. James is being mentioned by many of the Democratic leaders of the State as a United States Senator to succeed Joe Blackburn. Mr. James is one of the greatest statesmen Kentucky has ever produced and a born orator, and would be a great credit to Kentucky in the Senate.—Fulton Leader

The opposition to the administration failed signal to develop the strength with which they had been credited, the Beckham forces winning all contested points in a manner, securing complete control of the party machinery, naming the delegates to the National Convention and formulating the platform.

The opposition seemed to take their defeat good humoredly, and it is to be hoped that the last vestige of discontent will now disappear from the ranks of the party.

The speech of Congressman James nominating Gov. Beckham for the temporary chairmanship was a model of its kind and did much toward smoothing the ruffled plumage of the opposition, and creating a better understanding. Ollie is a shrewd politician and knows just when and where to 'pour oil upon the troubled waters.'

Some people have an idea that the people up in the mountains in Eastern Kentucky don't have the conveniences of life, but from the above it will be seen that they do, and many of the luxuries, too.

A Beautiful Wedding.

Beautiful in every detail was the wedding of Mr. Geo. Pennell Roberts to Miss Evalyn Marshall Shelby Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at the residence of Mr and Mrs J. W. Wilson. The house was a bower of flowers—palms, smilax and roses being in evidence on all sides.

The bride, gowned in a traveling costume, was given away by her brother, Mr Albert Shelby, of Louisville; Miss Nell Marshall of Bowling Green, Ky., was maid of honor. Dr Richard J. Morris was best man.

The Lohengrin wedding march was chosen and was beautifully rendered by the bride's sister, Mrs Wilson. A wedding chorus, sung by Mr E. G. Kimpton, choir master of St. Margaret's church, Chicago, assisted by Miss Kittie Gray Ira Pierce and Mrs J. W. Wilson added to the sweet strains of the harp, made the sweetest music ever heard. The Ring service of the Episcopal church was performed by Rev. L. W. Rose, of Henderson, in an impressive way, and the young couple were launched on the marital sea under the most favorable and happy auspices. Immediately after the service the bride and groom took the afternoon train for St. Louis, where they will spend the honeymoon visiting the Exposition.

Mrs. Douglas Passes Away.

Mrs. Nellie Douglas, wife of Mr. George W. Douglas, died at her home near town Monday, after an illness of several weeks, at the age of 70 years.

Mrs. Douglas, whose maiden name was Brent, was a daughter of John Brent, one of Kentucky's pioneer settlers. She was twice married, Mr. Douglas being her second husband. She was first married in early womanhood to Commodore Miller, of Illinois, who died in the early 60's and by whom she had four children, all of whom preceded her to the land of shadows. Her oldest son, James Miller, was drowned 20 years ago while out bathing in the Mississippi river, near Riverton, Miss. Her husband and one sister, Mrs. J. H. Threlkeld of Paducah, survive her, her only other sister, Mrs. M. B. Baynes, having died a few years ago in this county. Her only brother, W. H. Brent, went to California during the gold excitement in the 50's and is supposed to have died there years ago.

The deceased was a devoted Christian lady and a member of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian church. Her remains were interred Tuesday afternoon in the Chapel Hill cemetery, Rev. A. J. Thompson, of Kuttawa, conducting the funeral services.

A Harrisonburg teacher told a colored pupil to construct a sentence in which the words "defeat" and "debasement" were used. After much effort the boy produced the following: "John went to go down de stairs, defeat done slip, and he fell into de debasement."

I kicked and kicked and kicked
The table leg, I struck it,
And nearly broke my leg short off—
And almost kicked the bucket.

Got What They Wanted.

Over in the mosquito country an old farmer died. He was reputed to be rich. After his death, however, it was found that he died penniless. His will was very brief. It ran as follows:

In the name of God, amen. There's only one thing I leave. I leave the earth. My relatives have always wanted that. They can have it.

A Question.

Here is a question I want to ask: How will you measure in money the cost of my murdered child? Is honor valued in bank notes? Can you pay for a broken heart? Tell me, how many dollars will pay for the life-blood shed from the veins of the true and innocent who were murdered and are dead.

What the Leading Man
Needed to Mollify Him

"I MUST have a change of scene," he said.

Truly he was in sad plight. He had grown pale and wan, his eyes were listless, and he had no heart for anything.

"I am weary," he went on, "of seeing the same thing day after day and night after night. There is the same tree in the same place, the same house, the same balcony, the same fence, the same old mill. The same girl swings on the same gate and welcomes me with the same words. I have the same emotions, and the same gruff father rushes from the same door to drive me away. The monotony of it is maddening. I must have a change of scene."

They argued with him, but to no purpose.

"One cannot have things as he would wish in this world," they said. "It should be some consolation to you that the girl is true."

"But it's the same loyalty, the same devotion," he persisted. "She never changes. I tell you, I've got to break the monotony of this life somehow. I've got to have a change of some sort, and a change of scene is the easiest arrangement, it seems to me."

They saw that he was in earnest.

"Stick it out one more month," they said, "and we will put on a new play that will give you a complete change of scene and possibly a new sweetheart."

Thus the leading man of the successful melodrama was mollified.—Chicago Post.

No Snoring.

Postmaster General Payne the other day told a story of something that he once saw in a Milwaukee courtroom. Through the kindness and tact of the judge the court clerk was saved from a fine.

"I one day attended," said Mr. Payne, "a session of the court at which this judge presided. The court clerk was a very old man; he had served with fidelity for many years, but age was beginning now to tell on him. He fell asleep while in the courtroom, and in a little while he was snoring.

"The snorer, of course, disturbed the proceedings of the court, but the judge showed great tact in interrupting, without embarrassing, the clerk.

"Clerk Jones," he said in a loud voice. "Clerk Jones, some one is snoring!"

The clerk awakened with a start and jumped to his feet.

"Silence!" he exclaimed. "There must be no snoring in the courtroom, and he glared fiercely all about him."—Philadelphia Press.

Echoes of the State Convention,

The big Congressman from the First district was accorded the first real demonstration of the convention. He was on his feet as the last words died on the lips of Chairman Young, and the delegates applauded long and vigorously. In opening Mr. James declared that the purpose of the convention was not to recall bitterness and strife of the past few years in the party, but to dwell together in harmony and to select and send to St. Louis a delegation of representative Kentuckians to help reclaim the country. "I am glad to see the Democracy of the Fifth district here uncontested by a man who lately dealt with the Republicans. I have no quarrel with your chairman. I come with word from the country Democrats that they are here to stand with you against this man Whallen. I come from those country Democrats to present the name of a young Democrat, tried and proven—one who came from the grave-side of the late Isaac Wilson, of Nelson county, and, traveling in night, arrived in Frankfort to answer "Here," and vote for his party's nominee, "Joe" Blackburn. He came again and again to represent his party and his State in its counsels at Frankfort, and came with your martyred leader and held his place at the head of the Democratic hosts when Republican bayonets flashed all about him. He has since led your party to another victory and still another.

He said the charge against Beckham was that he had been victorious. If there was a machine he declared the people were in control of it and that it run the assassins out of Kentucky. He said if machines give victory to the party it was a pity the machine could not be transferred to other States where Republicans were in control. He said he challenged any man to pick a flaw in Gov. Beckham's record, to show where he had violated a single Democratic principle. He prosecuted the name of the Governor amid loud applause.

The Tramp's Dead Shot,

BY O. G. W.

"Have you sawed that wood?" asked a lady of a tramp who enquired for breakfast. "Have I sawed that wood?" exclaimed the tramp in contempt. "I have seen that wood, and I don't intend to work for a lady who doesn't understand the rules of grammar better than you do."

Annoyed at such impudence the lady paled, and quietly seating herself in her rustic arm chair gazed intently at this extraordinary creature, and silently and slowly moved back a few paces.

Observing close by an empty coal scuttle the tramp stooped, and picking it up examined it closely, and finding it had no socket, he carefully placed it on the ground, firmly and bottom side up, and then with the confidence of a "Crab Orchard horse jerk," he mounted his improvised rostrum.

Facing the lady and assuming the attitude of an expert orator, he addressed her as follows:

"Fair haired lady, with those beautiful peach blossom cheeks and superb look of courage and hope, I crave your undivided attention and with all due deference to your position in society, your youth and sex, I shall endeavor to enlighten you and touch the heart that lies so safely behind that look. Lady, listen: I once was ultra clever at amazing calculations.

I mastered comic sections and the theory of equations; And differential calculus and oblique permutations,

With awful probabilities of convere variations.

Parabolic formula I eyed with admiration,

And hailed a crux elliptical with boisterous ovation.

For algebra I looked with undisguised anticipation,

And learned with ardor complicated differentiation.

But yet I ne'er could understand Demosthenes' orations.

And I raved at Latin grammar with offensive appellations.

Thucydides' oratory seemed all prevarication.

And Cicero's oration concealed obfuscations,

I looked upon elegiac verse as use less occupation,

And Greek iambics as a work of supererogation;

For I always thought the language of a dead and buried nation Was wholly unproductive of the least remuneration.

And now, dear lady, I have un-bosomed myself and uncovered to you a picture of the past. Tell, me, lady, dost thou like the picture?"

No answer came. With that faraway stare, as one lost in deep meditation, she, still and immovable, sat in her rustic chair.

The electric flash of his grandiloquence, and brilliant coruscations of rhetoric had, indeed, enlightened and touched the heart back of that look." The illumination was too intense,

She was dead.

The waiting, suffering, disgusted spirit, wounded and sore— withdrew and cursed the name of charity.

An Undesired Guest.

"Why don't you present arms to your superior officer?"

"I would, captain, only I didn't care for a dicky old gun like this."—New York Evening Journal.

Union of Churches.

The Presbyterian presbyteries at Buffalo, Dallas and Mobile voted last week to unite and appointed committees to draw up articles of federation, etc. This will make the Presbyterian body power and one of the leading church bodies.

The Methodist General Conference appointed a committee to meet the Congregationalists and United Brethren and form an amalgamation with them, thus adding a third more members to the already large protestant church.

This union of churches will have a marked effect upon the religious world and will do much toward elevating and popularizing the church. We see in it but the stepping stone for the further amalgamation of churches and in perhaps one or possibly two decades the Methodists and presbyterians could federate and thus form a body of Protestants outnumbering the Catholics.

It may also lead to the amalgamation of the close communion churches and eventually lead to but two general Protestant church heads. The churches are but following in the footsteps of the commercial world and uniting in common interests—a species of trust. It will mean better ministers, less begging, less backbiting and quarreling, more liberality and tolerance and the true conception of christianity as Christ taught it. Ex

CENTRAL KENTUCKY,

Mr. Editor: Your valuable paper comes to me every Monday. I hail it with delight, enjoy its evidences of prosperity and listen with interest to its stories of the "ups and downs" of life, "notes of joy" and "tales of woe."

I glance at the paper to see who has been to town, who has chanced to take a visit, or who is in feeble health, dead or married. The local items tell me that there is peace and harmony abounding.

I read with interest the letters from Kentuckians who have lost their moorings and drifted off to different parts of the country, from Florida to Washington, How your people are scattered!

When I see Marion school reports, with her well-earned victories and high achievements, I say, hurrah for Marion.

I peer down into "Old Jim," hear the battling at "Cullen's," note the victories of "Nancy Hawks," the success of "Columbia," and the rest of them. Every little school boy knows when he sees spar, lead, zinc and such mineral. Almost every old mule has had a pull at a load of Crittenden's earthly treasures. Every land-owner hopes that there is a fortune hidden beneath his sassafras sprouts and red gullies.

But while Crittenden county is bringing forth her rich minerals, this section of the state is growing fat on her rich oil fields. This oil section embraces Wayne, Rus-

WASHINGTON LETTER.

As the time draws near for the great work to begin on the Panama Canal, the difficulties of climate, disease, etc., begin to melt away, if the expectations of those in authority are not dreams. Col. George, chief sanitary officer of the Panama Canal, has formulated a tentative plan which will make everything safe and lovely. All villages in the zone will be put under military camp regime, and the inhabitants will be obliged to obey rules rigidly. A large dose of court martial. Large to sweeten things is to be used in abundance; camps are to be drained; mosquito nets will be prevalent for the workmen to sleep under; stagnant pools are to be drained, and the whole zone is to be sprinkled with coal oil to utterly destroy malaria and yellow fever bearing insects. Better than all the rest a hospital train will make daily trips across the isthmus to pick up those who have fallen in the ranks, and the cases will be segregated as much as possible.

The Democratic National Committee have established headquarters at the Riggs House in this city, and are carefully editing the document which are to be sent to the people. Among the literature to be distributed Congress man Kitchell's speech on the Press, and Burke Cockrell's speeches.

For a Hundred Years.

For a hundred years or more Witch Hazel has been recognized as a superior remedy, but it remained for E. C. DeWitt & Co., of Chicago, to discover how to combine the virtues of Witch Hazel with other antiseptics in the form of a salve. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is the best salve in the world for sores, cuts, burns, blisters and piles. The high standing of this salve has given rise to counterfeits, and the public is advised to look for the name "DeWitt" on the package, and accept no other. Sold by Woods & Orme, Druggists.

A WINTER PROPOSAL

(Original)

Clara and I were walking over the snow.

"They have a curious custom in Lapland," I said to her.

"What is it?" she asked.

"In Lapland the crime, after murder, that is punished with the greatest severity is marrying a girl against her parents' wishes."

I glanced sidewise at Clara to see how she took this statement. I had been to her father to ask his permission to pay my addresses to his daughter. He commended my honorable nature in speaking to him first, but informed me that he had other plans for her.

"That must be splendid," she said.

"Splendid! Why so?"

"I think of the exciting episodes between lovers with an ax hanging over the man's head."

"Then you do not approve of the interference of parents in such matters?"

"I didn't say that. But how are marriages arranged in that country?"

"When a man wants a girl without 'speaking' to her he goes to her parents and asks for her hand."

"And suppose they refuse?"

"Then there is no hope for him."

"Unless he has great courage and would rather die than lose her."

"Certainly."

"But supposing the parents are willing?"

"In that case they inform the girl that she is sought in marriage. Possibly she may never have seen the suitor or may not even know his name. On an appointed day the girl, her parents, friends and the suitor meet at a feast, and the man and maiden especially interested are placed opposite each other at table, so that they can look each other over and converse."

I wonder what they talk about?" remarked Clara musingly.

"After the banquet all go to an open space where what they call the race for a wife takes place. The usual distance is about a quarter of a mile, and the girl is given a start of a third of the course. If she wishes she can easily reach the goal before her suitor. In that case it is plain she doesn't want him. If she does want him she will make so poor a race that he can catch her."

We walked on meditatively. I didn't know what Clara was thinking of nor did she know what I was thinking of. Nevertheless I felt that our thoughts were not far apart.

"Supposing," I said, "supposing that you were a girl?"

"That's not hypothetical; it's an axiom."

"who had a lover."

"Well?" she said softly.

"and that lover should propose to you the Laplanders' race for a wife? Would you consent?"

"To marry him?"

"No, no, you know what I mean to the race!"

"oh, yes?" if he wanted to ask me to be his wife in that fashion I would have no objection to giving my reply in the same way."

Snow brings a singular stillness, and as we ceased speaking all about us was as silent as we. I paused and turned to look down upon the frozen landscape, while Clara trudged on.

"What a straight piece of road!" she called, pointing before her, her voice sounding loud above the stillness. I went to where she was standing and looked at the bit of road she referred to. It was straight as an arrow, and at its further end was a bridge.

"Just the place for a foot race," I said.

To this there was no response.

"Would you like to try which of us can reach that bridge first?" I asked.

"I don't mind," she said under her breath.

"Well, since you are a girl, I must give you a start. Go as far as you like, while I stay here. When you are ready wave your hand."

Without a word she started on, but slowly, oh, so slowly. It seemed to me she would never get to the starting point. She walked half the distance, then, after as much delay as she could find an excuse for, waved her hand and started to run.

There was a great change in her motions the moment the race began. Indeed she ran so fast that I thought it would be impossible for me to catch her, though I am a fast runner. Was she intending to reach the bridge before me? No. Soon her speed began to slacken. I increased mine. Then she started forward again. I lagged. Once more she lessened her pace, and I, taking heart, ran on like the wind. She was within a hundred yards of the bridge, I two hundred, when she made another spurt. She came within ten feet of the goal and stopped short. When I came up with her, she turned and threw up her arms in token of surrender. I clasped her, and she let them fall upon my shoulders.

We did not break the winter stillness by a word. Nor was there sound of bird or beast or human being. Whether seconds or minutes passed I do not know. I only remember that we were recalled to our surroundings by a far distant jingle of sleigh bells ringing soft and clear. Then we turned and walked on.

When I went again to Clara's father to ask for her hand, I had learned that instead of being her master, to dispose of her as he chose, he was her slave and obeyed her slightest wish. The matter of marriage he would never have arranged a match for her except with a "prince of the blood," for he would have considered far beneath her. My second request was mere matter of form.

F. A. MITCHELL

HIS BRAVE DEED

The mining town of Capleton was alive with excitement. Mr. Hilton, the owner of half the mines and more than half the village, was to give a ball in honor of his son Carl's twenty-first birthday and also to celebrate the return of his only daughter from the English school to which she had been sent when but ten years old.

Carl Hilton was the only son, and because of his parents' indulgence had become selfish and tyrannical. His teacher abominated him and was blind to his faults. As Mr. Hilton had been out of health for more than a year, Carl had attended to most of the business, and he had so tyrannized over the miners that they one and all hated him, but they loved and respected him further and for his sake bore in silence the abuse of the son.

It fell to the lot of Fred Chase, one of the foremen in the mine, to escort the beautiful Nini to dinner, and so deeply did they become engaged in conversation that it was some minutes before Fred noticed that Carl sat directly opposite and was watching them close by.

"I intend to visit the mines tomorrow," said the girl in tones loud enough to be heard by her brother. "I want to descend the new shaft."

"I shall be very happy to conduct you through the mines, but you must not descend the new shaft, for it is not safe. I have warned your brother that the roof of the mine is in danger of falling, but he only laughs at me, and I fear some terrible accident will be the result of his neglect."

"You are a fool, Fred Chase! The shaft is safe enough. I shall take Nini there myself tomorrow," said Carl angrily.

The following morning Carl started for the new shaft alone. Nini refused to accompany him and begged him to delay his visit until the roof was made secure.

Carl reached the shaft just as half a dozen miners came from it, and in answer to his inquiries was told that Fred Chase and another man had remained behind to finish filling the last car with ore.

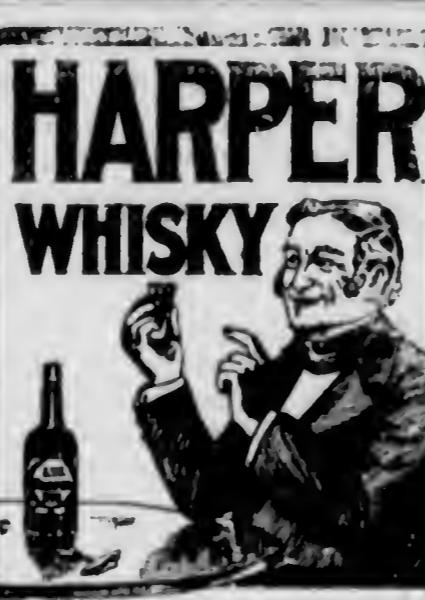

In a few minutes he was lowered to the bottom of the shaft. In the distance he could see the lights of the two miners. By the light of his own lantern he saw that some of the beams were bent. All seemed weighted to their utmost capacity, and he shuddered as, in passing one large post, a slight cracking sound was heard.

"I am going on a short distance to look at the ore. You may wait for me at the foot of the shaft, and we will be drawn up at once," said Carl.

He stopped on, while Fred and his companion returned to the entrance. They had barely reached it when they heard a loud report behind, a cry mingled with the noise of falling rocks, then all was still.

Only an instant did they stand motionless. Then Fred grasped the rope and gave the signal to be hoisted to the surface.

During the last year eighteen miles were added to the gravel roads, making a total of 78 miles of gravelled highway and 310 miles including dirt roads.

County Judge R. T. Lightfoot has been in correspondence with Northern parties on the subject and believes the use of oil will both improve the roads and add to their durability and keep down dust ~~as~~ well.
